Misfortunes never come singly. Madison no sooner loses the annual sessions of the Legislature, than she has the small-pox. A case in that city proved fatal on Sunday.

General Fremont is no longer Governor of Arizona Territory. President Arthur has signed a commission for Frederick A. Tuttle. General Fremont seems determined to continue to disappoint his friends.

The way they sell newspaper stock in Milwaukee shows that they haven't much of a regard for conscience or feelings. Mr. A. M. Thomson, held thirty shares of Sentinel stock, which were sold by the sheriff for seventeen cents a share, or $5.10.

According to the report of the financial secretary of the United States Senate, he furnished only nine gallons and a half of alcohol to the Senate last year. This shows that the Senators do not draw all their alcohol from the Senate drugstore.

We have the report now that Clara Louise Kellogg has postponed her marriage. It is rather suspected that the more Miss Kellogg compares Mr. Whitney with tempting and valuable concert tours, and a quiet home life with the applause and flattery of the public, she begins to think that Whitney is not worth the sacrifice.

A. M. Soteldo, of Washington, clerk of the Senate committee on railways, died in that city on Saturday night. Death did not love a shining mark in this case. He went over to the Republican office in Washington on Thursday night last, for the sole purpose of getting into a quarrel with Mr. C. M. Barton, the news editor of the Republican. He opened the quarrel as he expected, but before he got through he received a fatal wound from Barton's pistol, which he did not expect. In this unfortunate affray, Barton was seriously wounded, having two bullets driven into his body, but he will recover. It is said that Barton was justified in defending himself in the manner he did, and that the early demise of Mr. A. M. Soteldo is no particularly great loss to good society in Washington, as he had been frequently engaged in unpleasant affairs. A man hasn't got right on his side, it always pays best not to lead off in a personal quarrel.

Thirty-four days of the session have already gone, and yet the Legislature has done nothing worthy of special mention. There are only five or six important bills before the Legislature, and except in regard to the hanging and the land grant bills, no material progress has been made. The bill to restore capital punishment which originated in the Senate, passed that body by a vote of 23 to 8, and is now in the Assembly. There is an opinion gaining ground that the bill will likely be killed in the Assembly, although there is a better prospect for its passage than there was two years ago when there was a stronger sentiment than now in favor of the restoration of the gallows. The bill will come up in the Assembly to-morrow, for which time it has been made a special order.

The land grant bill which transfers the large amount of land from the late Superior company to the Omaha company, has passed the Senate and is lodged in the Assembly. As passed by the Senate, $77,000 of the debts due the working men are to be paid by the company receiving the grant; but the Assembly wants the Omaha company to do still more, and that is to assume the debts of the Superior company contracted in Walworth and other counties some years ago and which are outlawed. The aggregate amount of these old debts is not known. It is likely that the Assembly will either defeat the bill or compel the Omaha company to pay up on the Superior's outlawed indebtedness.

The military bill which is now attracting considerable attention among military men, has not been acted upon. It is a re-draft of the bill of 1881, but is changed so as to allow the men one dollar a day for subsistence, in lieu of pay, and also furnishes railway transportation. The fate of this bill can not be told, but acting upon common wisdom, and the needs of the State, the Legislature would pass the bill.

The apportionment, which is not a great question, has been made an interesting one, and several bills have been prepared. The contest, so far in regard to this question, is a personal one between Senator Wing, of La Crosse, and Assemblyman Price, of Jackson. Mr. Price went to the Assembly for the chief purpose, it is said, of making a congressional district to suit himself, and he is now engaged in the business although his scheme may prove a failure. There has been a hitch in regard to the formation of the joint committee on apportionment, the Senate and Assembly disagreeing as to what representation each body should have. Until that is done there will be little done with the question of congressional apportionment. The next and last bill of interest is the "interest" bill. When some men are elected to the Legislature, they think their mission would prove a failure unless they introduced a bill to regulate the interest on money, and hence every winter there is a fresh bill to cut down the rate of money, and yet the bills usually seem prematurely born.

A. M. SOTELDO.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—An autopsy on the body of A. M. Soteldo, who was shot in a melee at the Republican office in this city last Thursday night, was performed in the presence of the coroner at the Providence hospital this morning. Great interest was felt in the result of the autopsy, for contradictory stories were told as to who fired the fatal shot. The dead man constantly averred that Barton shot him, and A. C. Soteldo, who did most of the shooting, affirmed that he did not fire until after Barton had shot his brother. Barton, on the other hand, said that he pressed his pistol against A. M. Soteldo's abdomen when he pulled the trigger, and he was not sure whether his pistol exploded or missed fire. The fatal ball entered the back of Soteldo's neck.

The general presumption was that the deadly shot was fired by A. C. Soteldo, who is now here in jail. Barton's pistol was of 32-calibre, while young Soteldo's pistol was of 39-calibre. The ball was found imbedded in the spinal column. It was perfectly intact when removed, not having been flattened or abraded. It weighed eighty-seven grains. General Boynton, of the Cincinnati Gazette, this afternoon caused to be removed the ball from a 32-calibre cartridge, and it weighed exactly eighty-seven grains. It would appear as though the fatal shot could not have been fired by Soteldo's brother. Some of Mr. Soteldo's relatives are in the city, and they deny the statement that they have employed lawyers to prosecute the case against Barton. The funeral will take place next Wednesday afternoon.

TRACING THE RUMOR.

New York, Feb. 12.—The Herald has the following special from Cleveland: Prompted by rumors current in Washington to-day to the effect that Mrs. Garfield had written to President Arthur asking him to reprieve Guiteau, the representative of the Herald visited the residence of the lady on Euclid avenue to ascertain what foundation, if any, there was for the report. Reaching her quite home about 7 o'clock, I was admitted into the hall, from which through an open door, I discovered the wife of the martyred President surrounded by the younger members of the family. She was reading aloud to them, and the low, half-mourning evidence of her voice fell pleasantly upon the ear. Sending in a card, I was ushered into the reception-room, where Mrs. Garfield soon appeared. She was attired in deep mourning. Her face, though bright and cheerful, bore furrowed traces of the terrible affliction through which she has passed. Advancing, she extended her hand with cordial greeting. An inquiry after her health elicited the response that she was feeling very well, and that all the members of the family, including Grandmother Garfield, were at present in excellent physical health.

"A rumor comes from Washington, Madame, that you have written a letter to President Arthur, asking him to reprieve Guiteau. Is it true?" Her face flushed with a mingled expression of surprise and indignation, she replied promptly and with emphasis: "Absurd, there is not a word of truth in it. I have not written to the President at all upon the subject."

"How do you suppose the rumor originated?"

"I cannot say. There is no foundation whatever for it, so far as I am concerned. I have expressed no wish or opinion in the matter, and shall not."

AN ORPHAN'S FATE.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 12.—A sensation involving one of the wealthiest and best known families of Delafield, a town in the neighboring county of Waukesha, has come to light through the institution of a suit to recover a large estate left to a young girl by her father, and who came to a most untimely death. Six years ago, William Hughes, a wealthy farmer, of Delafield, died and left all of his property to his son Willie and his daughter Perrie, a bright-eyed and vivacious child. There were four older children, but they were disinherited. Mrs. Hughes took charge of the farm, and raised the young children. Two years ago she hired a man named Tom Evans to superintend the farm work. Instead of that he began making love to Perrie, who was but a little more than 12 years old at the time. Matters ran on until early last spring, when the Hughes family were startled by the discovery that Perrie was enceinte. She confessed that Evans had effected her ruin after repeated entreaties, and the seducer came forward and proposed to marry the scarcely 14-year-old child. Mrs. Hughes, divined that he was after the girl's property, and said it would be better that the child bear its disgrace than lose all of its property, as Evans was fast becoming a disreputable character, and a union would have no other result. Evans was not to be balked in this way, and so he induced the girl to visit a magistrate, where they were married, he making oath that she was over 15 years of age. The laws of Wisconsin provide that any man over 18 and woman over 15 years of age may marry, with their parents' consent, if there are no physical or moral disabilities. In a few months after the marriage the girl gave birth to the child, and died a few days later from puerperal fever. The infant lived a week and then followed its young mother. The disgraced family kept the matter so quiet that there were never more than a dozen people who knew anything of the tragic affair. The matter was made public yesterday by Evans visiting the city and engaging counsel to contest for the wife's share of the estate. The family refused to recognize the marriage, and deny its validity on the ground that Perrie Hughes was less than the prescribed age—15—when it was performed. Evans has engaged eminent legal counsel, and a long and bitter lawsuit will result. He claims that the property reverted to him on the death of the child, it having lived a week.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Compend of Measure for Measure—The Series of Modern Physics—Studies in the Life of Christ.

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY OF "MEASURE FOR MEASURE." Edited with notes by William J. Rolfe. A. M. Forman, head master of the high school, Cambridge, Mass. New York: Harper & Bros. publishers. Price, cloth, 60 cents.

This is the twenty-seventh play of Shakespeare which Mr. Rolfe has given to the public. As already has been said by the Gazette, they are the most popular of any edition of Shakespeare which has appeared in this country, for the reason that each play is printed in a separate volume, with historical and critical notes, fine illustrations, and with an index of words and phrases explained. While this edition was designed chiefly for schools, it is most admirably adapted for private reading, and in this respect is more suitable than any other edition of Shakespeare published in this country.

For sale by Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago, and by the local trade in Janesville.

THE CONCRETS AND THEORIES OF MODERN PHYSICS. By J. B. Stoddard. New York: D. Appleton & Co. publishers. 1 vol.; price, cloth, $1.25.

This is a book written by a lawyer—Judge Stallo, of Cincinnati—and will prove a valuable addition to the international Scientific Series, published by the Appletons, and a useful work to all interested in the study of scientific questions. Many of the questions of science and philosophy remain unanswered because the questions are founded on erroneous assumptions, and require answers in irrational or impossible terms. A determination of the proper attitude of scientific inquiry towards its objects is, therefore, the most pressing intellectual need of our time, as it is a pre-requisite of real intellectual progress at all times. Judge Stallo discusses the first principles of the mechanical theory of the universe, the theory of the atomic constitution of matter, the kinetic theory of gases, the errors of metaphysics, the nebular hypothesis, etc. The work is written in a clear, vivid style; the argument is direct and forcible; the reasoning acute, and the knowledge displayed remarkable in its range and minuteness.

For sale by Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago, and by the local trade in Janesville.

STUDIES IN THE LIFE OF CHRIST. By the Rev. A. M. Fairbairn, D. D., Principal of Airedale College, Bradford, and of Studies in the Philosophy of Religion and History. New York: D. Appleton & Co. publishers. 1 vol.; price, cloth, $1.25.

Those who want important help in the study of the life of Christ, should read Dr. Fairbairn's book. It is written in a popular vein, and the discourses were originally prepared as a series of Sunday talks while he was a minister at Aberdeen, Scotland. The author sends the volume forth, as he says, in the hope that he may help to make the Person it seeks to interpret more real, living, and lovable to the men of to-day.

For sale by Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago, and by the local trade in Janesville.

That Germans know how to manage matters. In Berlin, as in other cities and towns of Germany, street music is not only tolerated, but licensed, and the consequence is—what? Why, that there is little or no street music. The license kills it. You need have no altercation with a man or woman who refuses to go away with his or her gurdy gurdy, bagpipes or trombone. You take his or her number, and complain to the police; and they "see about it." Merely that and nothing more.

Fees of Doctors.

The fee of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present. We believe the schedule for visits is $3, which would tax a man confined to his bed for a year, and in need of a daily visit, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness.—Ed.

THE NIHILISTS.

Declaration of Principles of the Party. The following is the code of the Nihilists, as promulgated at St. Petersburg:

A. We are socialists and champions of the people. We hold that socialism alone can insure to humanity the blessings of liberty, equality and fraternity. We hold that the will of the people can alone sanction and achieve the social reforms we contemplate. No idea or social institution can prosper if it is imposed on the people.

B. [In this paragraph the sufferings of the Russian working class, resulting from exorbitant taxation and arbitrary administration, are exposed.]

C.—1. We hold, therefore, the overthrow of the present Government the foremost duty. By this revolution our nation shall attain—1, the faculty of an independent development of all its forces, according to its own will and customs; 2, the possibility of a further growth of the socialistic instructions, forming a part of our national life, such as the artel (workmen associations), the obshchina (land commune), etc.

2. We hold that the will of the people may be clearly expressed in a national assembly, elected by universal suffrage, which, though by no means an ideal form of expression, is nevertheless the only one possible under the present circumstances.

3. It is, therefore, our intention to take the state power from the hands of the present Government and confer it on a national assembly, which is to decide as to the future constitution of our country.

D.—Therefore we demand:

1. A regular representative assembly elected by universal suffrage.

2. A full local self-government of all provinces, districts and townships.

3. The commune an independent, economical and administrative unit.

4. The land to be declared state property.

5. A system of measures aiming at the transmission of all factories and workshops to co-operative associations of workmen.

6. Full liberty of conscience, of speech, of the press, of associations and meetings.

7. Universal suffrage, without limitation as to class or property.

8. Abolition of the standing armies and institution of a national militia.

E.—In view of the above stated principles our action comprehends:

1. Propaganda agitation. Our propaganda purposes to diffuse among all classes of our people the idea of a democratic political revolution as the only means for attaining a better social condition.

2. Destructive and terroristic action. Our terroristic action consists in the destruction of the most pernicious agents of the Government, of spies, agents of the third section, etc. The purpose of these violent acts is to rob the Government of the force of its prestige in the eyes of the people, to show the latter the possibility of a struggle with the Government, and to foment thus the revolutionary spirit in the ranks of the people.

3. Organization of secret societies.

4. Secret agencies in the ministries in the army, in society, and so forth, have been instituted in all parts of the empire. New agencies are yet to be opened.

5. Organizations and outbreak of the revolution. The people being oppressed and the Government yet too strong, the party must take upon itself the initiative of the revolutionary outbreak. When and how can, of course, not be published.

A Chicago Man's Verification of the Bible.

A story is going around among the traveling men, so thoroughly illustrative of the push, tear and scramble in the ordinary business man's character that it is worth repeating. As the story goes, a Chicago Board of Trade man set out to "do" Europe and the East in a week or ten days, or such matter. In youth he had absorbed some New Testament legends, and felt a sudden interest on arriving in the Holy Land to cross the Sea of Galilee. The laziness of the ferryman and the indescribable slowness of the craft terribly exasperated the Chicago man, when he testily inquired: "See here, stranger, how long have you been running this ferry?"

"Forty-five years," was the placid and lazy answer.

"Who held it before you?" asked Chicago.

"My father, who ran it fifty years," was the calm reply.

"Well, how long has this damned monopoly been in your family, anyhow?"

"Three thousand years," pensively spoke the ferryman, as his dreamy gaze wandered to the palm trees upon the shore.

"Well, by thunder!" shouted the Chicago man, with muttering disgust, "it is no wonder Christ wanted to walk over it!"

A Sharp Rebuke.

A certain infidel, who was a blacksmith, was in the habit, when a Christian man came to his shop, of asking some one of the workmen if they had ever heard about Brother S.—and so, and what they had done? They would say so, what was it? Then he would begin and tell what some Christian brother or sister or minister had done, and then laugh and say: "That is one of their Christians we hear so much about." An old gentleman, a deacon, one day went into the shop, and the infidel soon began about what some Christians had done, and seemed to have a good time over it. The old deacon stood a few moments and listened, and then quickly asked the infidel if he had read the story in the Bible about the rich man and Lazarus? "Yes, many a time, and what of it?" "Well, you remember about the dogs—how they came and licked the sores of Lazarus?" "Yes, and what of that?" "Well," said the deacon, "do you know you just remind me of those dogs, content merely to lick the Christian's sores." The blacksmith grew suddenly pensive, and hasn't had much to say about failing Christians since.

The Average Novel.

The average novel may be described as an attempt by some match-making person with a turn for letters, to bring a nice young man in contact with a nice young woman, and after spinning out the story of their embarrassments to conventional three-volume length, to hand them over in bridal array to a sort of clergyman, to the end that he may celebrate between them the sacrament of holy matrimony, after which, as they have ceased to be heroic or interesting, they are conducted to their new and happy home, and we bid them farewell forever.

Growing Old.

"James," said the gracer, as he looked over his spectacles at the boy who was measuring out half a bushel of potatoes, "I find that I have spell 'sugar' with an 'h' in it. Is that right?"

"No, sir," replied the clerk, after spelling the word over several times.

"No, I guess it isn't, but I hate to scratch it out. What shall I do?"

"If it was me, sir, and I had put an 'h' in sugar, I should order hams and leave the 'h' off there."

"Of course—of course. Really, James, but I begin to feel my age, and I only wonder that I don't some time spell eggs with two g's."

Tribulations of Amateur Poets.

Rodney McGellan has been compelled to pay a verdict of $300 in a breach-of-promise case at Barrie, Canada, the evidence of his promise being the following verse which he wrote to the plaintiff:

Long have I loved, but some strange spell forbade my heart's tale to tell. Here, take this card, and simply feel the love my lips dare not reveal.

Henry Horace Dade, of San Francisco, sent an enemy a postal card on which was written an original and highly personal song, with this refrain:

Everybody, everybody knows, knows, you're the very biggest butt that grows.

Dade's effort cost him a fine of $50. W. R. Nowhouse, of Philadelphia, wrote some rhymes about the fickleness of William John and circulated them in printed slips. Here is a sample verse:

If you enter your affections on a youth like William John, You'll be likely to discover the foundation they are on.

For a fascinating cruiser like this individual at last 'pt to be contented with a solitary gal.

A threat of a lawsuit induced Nowhouse to sign an apology, and collect and destroy all the copies he could find.
